

X x
xenops

Cosmo and Charlie traveled inland to the rainforest of South America, in search of xenops. Xenops are small brown birds with longish tails, and flat beaks that curve up at the ends.

They are also known as “ovenbirds,” because they build clay nests that look like ovens! Xenops are insectivores, which means they only eat insects. They can be found in Mexico, Central America, and South America.

